Requiem in Red Mar 22 2022 Few aspects of American military history have been as vigorously debated as Harry Truman's decision to use atomic bombs against Japan. In this carefully crafted volume, Michael Kort describes the wartime circumstances and thinking that form the context for the decision to use these weapons, surveys the major debates related to that decision, and provides a comprehensive collection of key primary source documents that illuminate the behavior of the United States and Japan during the closing days of World War II. Kort opens with a summary of the debate over Hiroshima as it has evolved since 1945. He then provides a historical overview of thye events in question, beginning with the decision and program to build the atomic bomb. Detailing the sequence of events leading to Japan's surrender, he revisits the decisive battles of the Pacific War and the motivations of American and Japanese leaders. Finally, Kort examines ten key issues in the discussion of

Crowe's Requiem Jun 25 2022 "Irish writer McCormack's first novel (after a story collection, Getting it in the Head, 1998) makes good use of his finely honed sense of the macabre, but this tale of a strange boy, raised by his even stranger grandfather, is unable to sustain the promise of its beginning. Shorn of angel's wings in his fall to earth from on high, the newborn infant Crowe is so upset that he wails nonstop for three days. His grandfather, resident dark force in their remote western Irish village of Furnace, recognizes a kindred spirit and takes over his parenting, a job he does mostly by letting the precocious boy ask whatever questions he wants, reveling in the chance to instill his apocalyptic vision in one ideally suited to receive it. Years of neglect in public education fail to tarnish Crowe's unique brilliance, so when he takes the university entrance exam, not even aware of what it is, he passes easily. The moment he puts Grandfather and Furnace behind him, however, he begins to lose his bearings, wandering hopelessly around Dublin looking for the university and even running full tilt into a street sign as he gives a passing girl a second look. This last act gains him the compassion and companionship of the girl, Maria, a postgraduate who tends his bloodied face and gives him a new perspective on life. Eventually they become lovers, and for a time all is blissful -- but then Maria learns she won't be allowed to graduate unless she pays her bill, and slips into a veritable Slough of Despond. Desperate to have her back as she was, Crowe valiantly earns the money she needs by taking part in a medical experiment, but complications from the test make his triumph a hollow one. Dark energy generated by Crowe's fall crackles through the first pages, but details of the love story ultimately prove pedestrian, damping a bright vision into one fairly unremarkable."--Kirkus written in the past quarter century is about music - that it is reflexive and self-referential in some significant sense. It is music in search of an understanding of itself. This book tries to deepen the understanding of music about music as well as music itself in four ways. First, it puts music's own self-understanding onto an equal footing with philosophical aesthetics of music. It subjects pieces of music about music to close, detailed analysis, and puts the statements about the nature of music that emerge from these analyses into conversation with philosophical statements about music. Second, it investigates whether and in what way the concept of reflexive music makes sense and to what extent music about music is possible. Third, it inquires into the need for music to search for itself, and evaluates the connection between this need and the European fascination and then disillusion with the concept of aesthetic experience. self-understanding, that there are severe limits to the meaningfulness of music in general that it is thus impossible for music about music to be fully meaningful.

ethnic minorities and those on the margins of society, police corruption and the courts - both of the law and of public opinion. A gypsy discovers a headless body; Firmino, a young journalist who writes for a tabloid newspaper, takes up the case; the headless corpse is that of Damasceno Monteiro - who, having stumbled on a drug smuggling ring at his work, has stolen a shipment of heroin; and the police are suppressing evidence.

House of War Aug 03 2020 An incisive analysis of the Pentagon, the military, and their vast, frequently hidden influence on American life argues that the Pentagon has, since its inception, operated beyond the control of any force in government or society, drawing on extensive personal experience, exhaustive research, and numerous interviews to prove the author's contention. 100,000 first printing.

The Middle Mind Sep 23 2019 What do George W. Bush, the Ivory Tower, Steven Spielberg, and Terri Gross have in common? Does a political scandal make for good news copy? Does network programming allow us to unwind from a day's work? Does the art at the local museum make for pleasant cocktail conversation? An unflinching and wry look at the dumbing down of the American imagination. In this groundbreaking and incisive exploration, acclaimed social critic Curtis White describes an all-encompassing and little-noticed force taking over our culture and our lives. White calls this force the Middle Mind -- the current failure of the American imagination in the media, politics, education, art, technology, and religion. The Middle Mind is pragmatic, plainspoken, populist, contemptuous of the right's narrowness, and incredulous before the left's convolutions. It wants to protect the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, and has bought an SUV with the intent of visiting it. It even understands in some indistinct way how that very SUV spells the Arctic's doom. The Middle Mind is not about left or right, highbrow or lowbrow, academia or pop culture; in fact, it pervades society without discrimination. The danger is not in a specific point of view, but rather in how the Middle Mind thrives in the common ground of unquestioned mediocrity. All we seem to ask about the culture we experience is whether it's entertaining. White argues that we have forgotten how to read, to watch, to think for ourselves. Because it is neutral, widespread, and easily digestible, the Middle Mind has lulled the American imagination to sleep. As we sit comfortably amused and distracted, just outside the door there is an immediate crisis of a nation blindly following the path of least resistance. Irreverent, provocative, and far-reaching, White presents a clear vision of this dangerous mindset that threatens America's intellectual and cultural freedoms, concluding with an imperative to reawaken and unleash the once powerful American imagination.

Alexander Kastalsky Jun 20 2019 Alexander Kastal'sky (1856-1926) was a leading composer in the field of Russian church music whose work determined the course of its development in that period. An inspiration to composers such as Rachmaninoff and Stravinsky, he became a well-known ethnographer as well during the latter part of his life.

Requiem Sep 16 2021 Metelerkamp's fifth book of poems was written after the suicide of her mother. The book is a sequence of poems, with Latin subtitles taken from sections of the Requiem Mass. The relationship between the poem and the mass is often oblique, tangential, ironic, and sometimes also direct. Written in Metelerkamp's distinctive musical voice, the sequence articulates the process of mourning, exploring the issues of life and death. The poems record a layered search for some meaningful explanation of the ambiguous connection between love and destruction.

Freud's Requiem Dec 19 2021 A meditation on Sigmund Freud's theories about the link between creativity and mortality is based on the essay, "On Transience" as well as other literary works, in an analysis that places Freud's beliefs against the backdrop of his teen years, struggle with cancer, and death. 15,000 first printing.

Sterner Stuff Jun 01 2020 Frank Montgomery is principal of an art college, coping with an aging father and a mother in law on the dark descent into Alzheimer's. His marriage is strong, his relationships supportive - but in one way Frank is extraordinary: he is being talked of as a major figure in British art, a figurative painter of national reputation with commissions beckoning right up to royalty. As he struggles to live the good life and to create, he is much concerned by issues in both work and life: is it better to do new things, or old things perfectly? In this novel, Frank's values are put to the test. Once again Stanley Middleton dissects middle England with his sharp but healing scalpel, and in the process he explores family life, generational change, and the true nature of art through the complexities, pains and joys of its creation.
